My dog and I set out together to go round the lake. We left at the same time from the same starting point, we both took the same path in the same direction and we travelled at a constant speed. But my dog goes much faster than I do and he passed me once before we arrived back at the same time at the starting point.

What if my dog had gone round the lake at the same speed but in the other direction, how many times would he have passed me? Explain your answer.
